COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

Several weeks ago a request was made through this column for old town reports. Mrs. Ethel Bisbee had a bound volume of town reports from 1887 to 1905, the property of her late husband. Through her generosity she has presented this volume to the town, to be included in the town's file. The town now has a complete set except the year 1886, which was the first year that the town had a printed report.

Elsewhere in this issue is printed a copy of a letter from the U. S. Air Force to the town.

Sincerely,
Harold L. Bean

Bethel Mill Featured in National Magazine

Automatic log carriage moves away from camera past the saws to remove slab or board. Sawyer (Peter Seames) in chair controls all operations with push buttons. Logs coming from left are stopped and loaded by three arms in foreground. Log turner is recessed in floor when not in use.

The modern sawmill completed last year by P. H. Chadbourne Co. is feature in the May issue of The Lumberman, a nationally-distributed magazine published in Portland, Oregon. This mill, which has been called the most efficient sawmill of its size in the Northeast, replaced one built on the same location in 1939.

The new mill includes the first fully-automatic log carriage and the first slab chopper in the Bethel area. The lumber is sawn, edged, trimmed and graded by three men using highly-mechanized equipment. It is then automatically sorted while traveling along a 240-foot conveyor.

Slabs, edgings, and board ends from the company's two sawmills and from Ernest Blake's sawmill are converted into pulp chips and blown directly into rail cars for shipment to the Brown Company in Berlin where they are made into paper. Sawdust and shavings from the planer mill go to Wilner Wood Products Company in Norway where they are ground into wood flour, a filler used in plastics. The only part of the log not fully utilized is the bark, although some bark has been sold for industrial fuel.

The use of formerly-wasted materials to fill the needs of surrounding paper companies helps conserve the supply of growing timber to provide future employment in Bethel's many woodworking industries.

In September the mill will be expanded with the addition of a German gang-saw, capable of producing several boards at one time. The thinner saw blades will permit more lumber to be recovered from the logs.

Mr. Harold Bean
Town Manager
Bethel, Maine

Dear Mr. Bean:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you and the many people of Bethel, Maine for your fine assistance at the scene of the KC-97 accident at Newry, Maine on 27-28 June. The members of the support team from Dow were profoundly impressed by the wholehearted support they received from the people in your area.

Your Fire Department is to be commended on its professional ability. Chief Roderick McMillin and his men did a splendid job in quickly reaching the scene of the accident to insure that the fire was kept under control and deserve great credit for their efforts. The ladies of the Fire Department Auxiliary Mrs. Charles Merrill, Mrs. Herbert Lyon, Mrs. Neil Merrill, Mrs. Roderick McMillin and others who served coffee during the search also deserve much praise.

Please convey to these people and the many other volunteers who lent us their assistance my sincere appreciation.

Sheriff James Lassiter
South Paris
Maine

Dear Sheriff Lassiter:

I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for your splendid assistance after the crash of a KC-97 aircraft near Newry, Maine on 27 June. You, your deputies and the volunteers from your area performed invaluable service to the United States Air Force by your quick reaction to this emergency. The information relayed from your office to Dow and the assistance given to Lt. Colonel Carl Rice and his team at Newry was invaluable.

Please convey to your people my sincere appreciation for a job "well done." Your professional support reflects great credit to you, your office and the people of Maine.

Sincerely,
Henry J. Clerici

COUNTRY FLAVOR

OLD GRIST MILLS

When pioneers left the coast and went north and west, crossed the mountains and flat-landed down the rivers, as soon as a new settlement struck root, a miller built his mill with overshoot or undershot wheel.

Men and youths came on horseback along rough trails, carrying bags of precious grain that meant food for the family during the long winter. When roadmasters laid out roads from farm to farm, creaking oxcarts brought loads to be ground by the grooved stones.

Now the old mills are gone. Here and there along a stream or by a quiet millpond, one sees the foundation stones and perhaps the ruins of a dam built long ago. Trees have grown around the sites, old roads can barely be seen; the millpond is surrounded by willows and alders.

Before the age of science, the grist mills were busy places. The miller ground corn and wheat, rye and barley. He sharpened his own stones and kept his wheel, shafts and gears in repair. The mill was more than a commercial spot. Here men discussed the problems of a new community; there they gathered news to take back to women folks on lonely farms.

The old mills are gone, but in their time they played a pivotal role. No longer do the great wooden wheels turn; no longer shafts turn and mesh powerful gears. No longer trickles of grist come from the grooves of stones.

But to those with a feeling for history, the site of an old mill is sacred ground. The pioneers, with dreams in their hearts, conquered new land, built mills, established homes and communities. Men laid the foundation of a new nation, and a part of the foundation was the gristmill where the grain was ground that had grown on newly-established farms.

WEST PERU TREE FARM 1,000th IN NEW ENGLAND

The distinction of certifying New England's 1,000th Tree Farm has been won by Maine, according to an announcement by Robert M. True, Maine Tree Farm Committee chairman and woodlands manager for S. D. Warren Co., Cumberland Mills. "It is the property of Marlin L. Thurston, West Peru, and totals 30 acres," True said. Thurston is also a member of the Oxford Paper Co. Tree Farm Family of Rumford.

Thurston is a dairy farmer and has lived on his property since 1949. During the 11-year period he has maintained an interest in forestry and has developed a sound management policy. Products from the Tree Farm have included sawlogs, pulpwood, hollywood and fire-

A MID-YEAR REAPPRAISAL

The Stock Market Reappraised in the Light of Current Economic, Political and International Developments

The recent cut-back in steel production has been somewhat alarming to economists because it is an indicator that all is not going smoothly today. Nevertheless automobile output has been at the highest level since 1955 while industrial construction is also at high levels. Principal sufferer, which is a large user of steel, is the household appliance industry. Basically the steel situation is not as critical as it appears. Following the steel strike there was a large accumulation on the part of most industries but today consumption appears to be exceeding production. The automobile industry should enjoy a better year and such stocks as Ford, for investment, American Motors, as a businessman's risk, and Chrysler, as a speculation are attractive.

The paper industry seems headed for a good year and Crown Zellerbach and International Paper look attractive at current market levels.

Allied Chemical, American Cyanamid, and Monsanto Chemical should benefit from a good year in the chemical industry.

Even some oil stocks appear attractive although the outlook for the oil industry is still not too promising. Among these we favor Standard Oil of N. J. and Secony-Mobil.

In the heavy equipment field benefiting from high capital expenditures are General Electric, Westinghouse Electric and Blawie. Other companies doing well include Eastman Kodak, IBM, International Nickel, and U. S. Rubber.

Most of the glamor stocks have reached price areas where they may be vulnerable to any stock market decline, but Avco, Philco, and Sperry Rand are still selling at less than 20 times earnings. Brunswick Corp. is a leader in the leisure time field.

The shift from an era of co-existence back to one of the Cold War should result in increased military expenditures with General Dynamics and Martin Co., being two important beneficiaries. The growing economy overseas especially in Europe, should benefit Colgate Palmolive, Ferro Corp., Jepsen, Otis Elevator and Woolworth.

Outcome of the presidential election can have an important effect on investor psychology, and if a president were elected who would be considered favorable toward business, stocks should perform relatively well, while if someone were elected who is considered unfavorable to business, it could result in a rather serious decline in stock prices.

In the near future we can expect administrative action to stimulate the economy through easier money and other media, for it is politically essential to have favorable economic conditions at the time of an election. Therefore, business is likely to improve before election time with resulting higher stock prices. Easier money is likely to result in lower interest rates which in turn would cause higher prices for bonds as well as such fixed income stocks as selected public utilities and some food retail and tobacco stocks. International tensions should result in increased demand for stocks of companies closely related to the defense program.

Although the near term outlook for the stock market and for business is favorable a more cautious approach should be taken toward the intermediate term when one considers that declines from both business and the stock market have taken place in post-presidential election years.

HONOR PORTLAND WOMAN AT CONSERVATION SCHOOL THIS AFTERNOON

Governor John H. Reed is participating in dedication ceremonies honoring Mrs. Lillian Rogers Waterhouse of Portland at Maine's Conservation Education School on Christopher Lake, at Bryant Pond, this Thursday afternoon. A new combination recreation hall-classroom is being dedicated as "Lillian Rogers Hall."

Mrs. Waterhouse was instrumental in establishing the state's first conservation education program for teachers and school children, when, in 1956, she made her beautiful summer estate on Christopher Lake available for this purpose. She first deeded the property to the Maine Fish and Game Association; later, with the help of this association, ownership was turned over to the Conservation Education Foundation of Maine.

Since that time, the program in conservation education has grown steadily under the sponsorship of the University of Maine and the State Department of Education, including Farmington and Gorham State Teachers Colleges. Present director of the school is Franklin Downie, Conservation Education Supervisor with the Information and Education Division of the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Game. In addition to the Fish and Game Department, agencies co-operating in the education work at Christopher Lake include Maine Forest Service, Maine

FARMERS INVITED TO FIELD DEMONSTRATIONS AT FREEPORT JULY 25

Oxford County Soil Conservation District supervisors, Robert D. Hastings, East Bethel, and Edmund C. Smith, West Bethel, invite all interested local farmers to attend a field day at Freeport on July 25th.

This event is designed to show how the drainage equipment available through the Soil Conservation Districts actually operates using farm power. There will be demonstrations of the land leveller and the land scraper, owned by the districts, plus a commercially owned power grader.

The afternoon program will include: examples of the effect of drainage work and other practices done in previous years, forestry and wild-life management practices, and new techniques in the complete Forestry program of Wolf's Neck Farm, James Mann, farm manager, and Mr. Smith will be on hand to explain the methods of forage handling, zero pasturing, and bunker feeding.

V. A. NEWS LETTER

A veteran's net worth is one of the factors used in determining his eligibility to receive a pension under the new pension law which becomes effective July 1, 1960.

This means, according to Percy E. Graves, Acting Manager of the Togus VA Center, that pensions will not be paid to veterans having sizeable estates. The word estate, confusing to some persons, means in this connection the property, stocks and bonds, cash deposits or other items of value owned by the veteran that would make his net worth greater than is usually the case in pension eligibility.

Since circumstances alter cases, what might seem to be an ample estate might still leave the veteran in need. Mr. Graves said. Thus there is no hard and fast rule, but each case will be considered separately on its own merits.

In each case, the VA will consider the type of property owned by the veteran, the veteran's age, his life expectancy, his state of health, the number of persons dependent on him, his income and similar pertinent facts.
